Date: 7th Feb, 2019

Participants: 13

Professional development is provided through an academic in-service series of workshops designed for higher education faculty members. Since many faculty members in higher education institutions, especially those in majors other than education, complete their Ph D programs with a deep knowledge of their disciplines, but generally have little or no educational basics of classroom teaching; these workshops were developed to address that gap. The institution have found it necessary to implement professional development activities to assist faculty in developing the skills and strategies necessary to provide effective instruction.

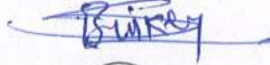

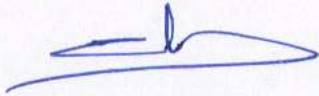

The aim for such workshops was to enhance the quality of teaching and foster a positive learning environment in order to help faculty members carry out their teaching functions effectively, making themselves ready for a growing role and reinforce job satisfaction.

The workshops are intended for faculty members to: provide them with information about the university and higher education learning processes; promote their talents for designing learner-centered courses; improve their skills for presenting information and implementing instructional strategies; provide them with support for designing, selecting and utilizing appropriate information and communication technologies and instructional media; develop their testing and assessment skills to support student learning; develop their research skills; and provide them with information on academic advising, supervision and the University credit system.
